Devlin joins School as Gillings Visiting Professor

Leah M. Devlin, DDS, MPH, former N.C. State Health Director, was appointed as a Gillings Visiting Professor in fall 2009. The position is based in the Department of Health Policy and Management.

In her new role, Devlin is connecting the School, including the N.C. Institute for Public Health, with legislators and others working on public health issues in practice. She also is consulting with School leaders to develop approaches to strengthen the school’s capacity as a regional and national leader in public health quality improvement.

Steckler and Eng recognized as Distinguished Fellows, SOPHE’s highest honor

Allan B. Steckler, DrPH, and Eugenia (Geni) Eng, DrPH, professors of health behavior and health education, received the Society for Public Health Education’s Distinguished Fellow Award for significant and lasting contributions to SOPHE and to the profession of health education.

The awards, which are the Society’s highest honor, were presented at the organization’s annual meeting in Philadelphia in November 2009.

SOPHE is an independent, international professional association made up of health education professionals and students.

Herring elected president of ENAR, prestigious biostatistics organization

Amy Herring, ScD, associate professor of biostatistics, was elected president of the Eastern North American Region (ENAR) of the International Biometric Society (IBS) for a three-year term, ending in 2013.

IBS is the largest professional organization of biostatisticians and biometricians in the world, drawing its 5,800 members from more than 25 countries. ENAR is the largest subgroup of the organization, incorporating 1,600 members from the United States and Canada.

Our School has a strong history of leadership in the society, with four members of the faculty—including the late Dr. Bernard Greenberg and Drs. Jim Grizzle, Gary Koch and Lisa LaVange—having previously served as president.

Richardson appointed to White House advisory board

David B. Richardson, PhD, associate professor of epidemiology, was appointed by President Obama in October 2009 to the White House Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health.

Richardson’s research investigates occupational and environmental causes of disease, with a particular focus on ionizing radiation. He has served in various capacities at the University of North Carolina since 1996 when he began as a postdoctoral researcher.
