FUNDED RESEARCH GRANTS AND CONTRACTS

Principal Investigator, Methods, Strategies and Ethics in Prenatal Genetic Screening in Vietnam, UNC Office of Global Health, July 1, 2008-June 30, 2010, Total award $15,000.

Principal Investigator, Reproductive Tourism in Southeast Asia: The Globalization of Basic Needs and Fondest Hopes, Summer 2008, Total award $5,000.

Principal Investigator, Professional development for HBCU Junior Faculty, Contract with Institute of Public Health (Morgan State University), NC A&T University, 2007 to present

Fogarty travel grant for research in Vietnam to continue work on birth defects prevention and reproductive health promotion for older women in Vietnam (2007-2008)

Principal Investigator, Latin American Perinatal Health Training Program, Tulane University, Fogarty International Center, 4/1/04-3/31/05, Total award $29,652.00

Principal Investigator, Latin American Perinatal Health Training Program, Tulane University, Fogarty International Center, 12/1/03-3/31/04, Total award $13,614.00

Co-Investigator: "A Longitudinal Study of Maternal Morbidity and Mortality, Ngorongoro District, Tanzania" Funded by Rockefeller Foundation. Co-PIs: Moke Magoma, Wasso and Endulen Hospitals, Ngorongoro District, Tanzania; Paul Leslie, Department of Anthropology UNC-CH; Ronnie Johnson, Ipas.

1/1/02 – 12/31/04

The goal of this partnership is to collect longitudinal data that will inform local health authorities and international reproductive health community about patterns and causes of, and possible solutions to the problem of maternal morbidity and mortality in a remote community setting in northern Tanzania.

Co-Investigator: "Center for Excellence in Health Statistics" Funded by Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. PI: William Kalsbeek, Department of Biostatistics, UNC-CH. $1,199,322. 9/30/99 - 9/29/02.

The UNC Center for Excellence in Health Statistics will focus on health promotion and disease prevention in underserved populations. The Center will provide the infrastructure and relevant expertise to address statistical design and analysis issues tied to research focusing on minority populations. My participation will focus on activities in two topic areas: Sampling and Measurement Issues in Studying Perinatal Health Outcomes in Latino Women and Linking Vital Records and Health Care Files in Maternal Morbidity Research.

Co-Investigator: "Work First Evaluation" Funded by Durham County, Department of Social Services. PI: Pam Silberman, Cecil G. Sheps Center for Health Services Research, UNC-CH. $172,187. 4/1/99 - 1/13/01.

This project will evaluate the impact of Durham County's Work First program on current and former Work First recipients. The evaluation will specifically attempt to determine whether Work First meets the N.C. General Assembly's goals of "facilitating families to move to self-sufficiency and in gradually eliminating generational poverty."

Principal Investigator: "Impact of Maternal Hospitalization on Women's and Children's Health" Funded by the Reproductive Health Division, National Center for Chronic Disease Prevention and Health Promotion, CDC and the UNC-CH Center for Health Promotion and Disease Prevention. $490,645. 9/30/93 - 9/29/99. (no cost extension)

The aims of the project are the following: 1) to develop an epidemiological profile of hospitalizations of women during pregnancy and the postpartum period; 2) to explore health care access and utilization factors in maternity-linked hospitalizations; 3) to examine the impact of maternal hospitalizations on birth outcomes and subsequently on women's and children's health; and 4) to supplement hospitalization data with information about ambulatory care for women during pregnancy and the postpartum period to aid in interpretation of morbidity trends. Current effort: 17%

Principal Investigator: "Health and Well-Being of African-American Women Service Workers" Funded by grant from Minority Health Research and Education Center, School of Public Health, UNC-CH. $4,500. 1993-1994.

This study conducted exploratory focus group interviews with African-American women employed as university housekeepers and poultry processors in order to generate hypotheses for further study about work-related health and family concerns of women working in low-wage, low-status occupations.

Co-Investigator: "Assessment of Statistical Materials and Methods for Minority Health Research (referred to as "Minority Health Project")

Funded by Association of Schools of Public Health and the National Center for Health Statistics/CDC. PI: Dr. Lloyd J. Edwards, UNC-CH Department of Biostatistics. 10/01/93 - 9/30/98. $1,258,707. ($1,165,450 directly $93,257 indirectly), 10/01/98-9/30/99 (no cost extension)

In years three and four, $193,222 in additional funding was received from UNC-CH School of Public Health, Glaxo Foundation, and National Institutes of Health.

The project created and maintained on-line data base systems containing articles, books, and an annotated bibliography of studies, analyses, and methods for developing statistics on the health of ethnic and racial minorities. It also created a week-long Institute which will teach courses emphasizing health issues for ethnic and racial populations and solutions related to collecting and analyzing data for racial and ethnic populations.

Co-Investigator: "Enhancing Data Utilization Skills Through Information Technology" (EDUSIT) Funded by Maternal and Child Health Bureau, Health Resources and Service Administration, DHHS. PI: Dr. Anita Farel, UNC-CH Department of Maternal and Child Health. $578,125. 10/1/97 - 9/30/00.

The EDUSIT initiative was developed in response to a unique RFP from the MCH Bureau, USDHHS, for grants to improve the ability of local, state and federal Title V programs to collect information and analyze data by enhancing their use of information technologies. The EDUSIT project addresses both Title V program needs for up-to-date skills in data collection, analysis, and integration with core public health functions, and the creative application of information technologies. The EDUSIT training model includes a self-paced, modular web-based data skills development course with both didactic and applied components for participants from each of 13 states. Course objectives are the following: 1) to improve collection, use, and evaluation of data; 2) to become proficient in using information technology and Internet resources to collect and evaluate data; 3) to strengthen the ability to communicate on-line with other Title V professional staff; and 4) to use web-based resources and data skills modules to address a health status problem. My primary responsibility was development of an instructional module on data assessment of social inequalities in health and monitoring of that web-based module during the course.

Co-Principal Investigator: "Web Development of a Minority Health Information Retrieval System" Funded by UNC-CH School of Public Health Innovative Information Technology Award. 1997-1998. $16,300. PI: Dr. Lloyd J. Edwards.

This grant was being used to enhance the Minority Health Project's on-line data base systems described above.

Co-Investigator: "Data Utilization Skills Development Initiative (DUSDI)" Funded by Maternal and Child Health Bureau, Health Resources and Service Administration, DHHS. Co-PIs: Dr.

Mary Peoples-Sheps and Dr. Anita Farel, UNC-CH Department of Maternal and Child Health. $602,844. 10/1/94 - 9/30/97.

The DUSDI project was designed to address the need for increasingly sophisticated skills in data management, analysis, interpretation, and integration with planning processes in state health agencies. Project activities centered around skills development for state health agency staff and development of child health indicators useful for state level measurement. My instructional role was primarily in the area of data on race and ethnicity, and I served as a mentor for state teams during the project's three-year cycle.

Co-Investigator: "Adolescent Pregnancy and Adolescent Pregnancy Prevention in Rural Areas of the United States" Funded by the US Agency for Health Care Policy and Research (AHCPR) through the North Carolina Center for Rural Health Research, Cecil G. Sheps Center for Health Services Research, UNC-CH. PI: Dr. Frank Loda, School of Medicine, UNC-CH. $249,724. 9/30/93 - 3/29/95.

AHCPR contracted with UNC-CH to conduct an 18-month study to find what was known about the problem of adolescent pregnancy and pregnancy prevention in rural areas. The major products were the following: a bibliography and synthesis of the literature on rural adolescent pregnancy and rural adolescent pregnancy prevention for the period 1980 - 1994; an evaluability assessment of data bases and their appropriateness for study of rural adolescent pregnancy; an analysis of vital statistics and Census data from Region IV states for selected fertility-related measures comparing rural and metro areas, age, and racial groups; a review of public and private resources and public policies related to adolescent pregnancy in rural areas; and an assessment of the types of programs and services available to adolescents in rural areas of Region IV, including identification of innovative approaches that may be replicated in other areas. My primary responsibility was for conducting, interpreting, and reporting analyses of secondary data from the Southeastern states.
