Scope of Work: DAI Global Health – Summer Fellowship

Job Title/Grade: Global Health Summer Fellow
Department: Global Health
Date: On or about May 13th – August 2nd, 2019

DAI offers a summer fellowship program for current public health master’s students enrolled at the UNC Gillings School of Global Public Health.

DAI is an international development company. For more than 45 years, we have worked on the frontlines of international development, tackling fundamental social and economic development problems caused by inefficient markets, ineffective governance, and instability. Currently, DAI is delivering results that matter in some 80 countries. Our development solutions turn ideas into impact by bringing together fresh combinations of expertise and innovation across multiple disciplines. Our clients include international development agencies, international lending institutions, private corporations and philanthropies, and national governments.

The Global Health Summer Fellows Program provides UNC Gillings master’s students a unique opportunity to contribute to global health as they work directly to support DAI’s work and programs. Students gain practical experience in technical areas, research, business development and program management and apply the skills they are building in their degree programs.

Program Objectives and Description

The Global Health Summer Fellows Program is a 10 to 12-week program based at the Bethesda office of DAI. The Summer Fellows assignment is integrated within DAI work and allows substantive opportunities to collaborate with and learn from many staff. Each individual Fellow works closely with one or more assigned mentors who help them achieve their program objectives. Working with a mentor allows maximum opportunities to learn about the organization, international development, and global health.

The Global Health Summer Fellows are expected to contribute to DAI’s work and programs by:

- Gaining in-depth understanding of one or more of DAI Global Health’s existing programs
- Liaising with senior and executive staff to ensure global health trends and market intelligence are broadly disseminated within the Global Health group
- Conduct research and analysis on Global Health programs, products, clients or new international development markets
- Support DAI’s pursuit of new Global Health business opportunities
- Represent DAI at external events for collaboration within the international development community.

The specific role and responsibility assigned to each Fellow is determined during the interview process when business objectives will be clearer.

Eligibility and Benefits
Applicants must be currently enrolled in a master’s degree program with the Gillings School of Global Public Health and be continuing as a full-time graduate student in the fall semester at UNC Gillings.

Applicants must demonstrate an interest in international development and global health.

The fellowship entails a 40-hour work week (not including holidays) for up to 12 weeks, from May 13th 2019, through August 2nd 2019. Fellows receive a stipend of $22 to $26/hour dependent on degree and number of years completed.

DAI is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer with a commitment to diversity. All individuals, regardless of personal characteristics, are encouraged to apply. EOE – Minorities/Females/Disabled/Veterans

Application Process
Applications are available on Research, Innovation and Global Solution’s website https://sph.unc.edu/global-health/ggg-internships-and-funding/.

Required materials include:

- Online application form, including:
  - Upload resume/CV
  - Upload current unofficial transcript
- Two letters of recommendation (one professional and one academic) – please have your references submit send their letters of recommendation to globalsolutions@unc.edu

Applications must be submitted with all required materials by Tuesday, February 19, 2019 for consideration. Applications will be reviewed by a UNC committee and forwarded to DAI.
